You are a living magnet.

What you attract into your life is in harmony with your dominant thoughts.

Brian Tracy

How a person thinks shapes their brain's circuitry. The more negative a person thinks, the more responsive the brain will be to negative events, experiences and thoughts. Therefore, the opposite holds true; the more positive and optimistic a person thinks, the more readily their brain will respond to positive thoughts and experiences. Thousands of studies over the past century have by how they think. An optimistic outlook is associated with resilience and a sense of control over one's life.

proven that a person's

health is directly affected

Our brains are connected to every organ in our body through the nervous, endocrine and immune systems. What we think and feel in our brain has a direct path to the rest of our body. Research has shown that traits of hostility, pessimism and negativity are associated with higher levels of stress and inflammation which is understood to be a shared biochemical foundation of many chronic illnesses.

People who are optimistic see positive aspects of situations even when faced with challenges. Optimism helps people adapt to change, manage stress, problem-solve more effectively and cope with the complexities of life.

Being positive and optimistic does not mean that things will turn out okay. Rather, it is knowing that You will be okay no matter how things turn out.

You have the capacity to boost your immune system by building optimism in your own life, simply by managing your thoughts.

Step 1: Believe in yourself and accept that your are going to make and learn from mistakes. Making room for errors takes away the pressure that everything must be perfect.

Step 2: Talk positively to, and about yourself. Tell yourself you are doing your best at this time and think about an aspect of your life where things are good. This will shift your train of thought towards acceptance and gratitude. Step 3: Address problems and challenges in a thoughtfully planned way. Take time to look at the issue and talk things through with others. One quality of optimistic people is their persistence in the search for options to address the problems and to take action. Step 4: Surround yourself with positive people. Step 5: Catch negative tive people. Step 5: Catch negative thoughts quickly. Let go of the negative thought and perhaps replace it with a positive one.

Your attitude about yourself and your life creates your reality. You get to choose how you think about life. Positive thinking can set you free.

On average you think about 60,000 thoughts each day. It is up to you to make sure that you do not use up 59,999 of them with negative and pessimistic thinking.

Your life is a reflection of your thoughts. If you change your thinking... You change your life. Instead of giving myself reasons
"Why I can't,"
I give myself reasons "Why I can".

Six Tips To Help Prevent Worrying as You Try to Go to Sleep (adapted from Mind, Mood and Memory Newsletter May 2016)

In the January / February 2015 newsletter I wrote two pages about the very important issue of "Sleep and Aging". This is a follow up article about preventing worries and stress from interfering with your ability to get to sleep. Research has shown that when we worry during the day there is a significant risk for having a disturbed sleep that night. We read and hear about our sleep deprived lives, and how stress and worry are chief culprits in robbing us of precious restorative sleep. Here are six tips and strategies to help address and manage the worries before we lay our heads on the pillow.

Keep a pad and pencil near the bed:

You can jot things down that are keeping you awake—like something you need to do the next day. Then, let it go.

Keep a diary: You can write about things that occupy your thoughts more than others. Pay attention to your behaviours. If you are making things worse than they actually are by assuming the worst outcomes, you are setting yourself up for negative situations and thoughts. Work on changing those thoughts and behavior patterns.

Set aside worry time: Dedicate a limited amount of time to think about what is worrying you during the day—say 10—20 minutes. Think of solutions and keep the worry in perspective. If it resurfaces at bedtime assure yourself you thought it through earlier in the day.

Make a list of your worries: Write down your issues and problems and include a description of your plan to address each one. If the worries resurface later that night, recall that you have already decided on a plan.

List the worries you can do nothing about: Identify the worries you have no control over. Worrying about terrorist attacks or climate change are two examples of worries not in your immediate control. Acknowledge that worrying is not always helpful.

Use relaxation techniques: The focus of the last newsletter was on meditation and breathing as vital strategies to manage stress, sleeplessness, and unhealthy behaviours. Focused deep breathing is the single most useful technique you can learn to get to sleep.

Your diaries can be a record of how you are managing life. If things seem to be overwhelming you, make an appointment with your doctor and bring your diaries to share.

Your Daily Survival Kit to Help You (and your friends) Stay Positive

This email made the rounds a couple of years ago and a cherished friend sent it to me. I told him I would pass it on to my Senior Friends. My friend died last November, and every time I see this email I am reminded of him and his simple gift. So from Terry, to me, to you, here is the Daily Survival Kit: (If you think we should make a bunch of these up to give away, let me know)

Toothpick... to remind you to pick the good qualities in everyone, including yourself.

Rubber band... to remind you to be flexible. Things may not always go the way you want, but it can be worked out.

Band-Aid... to remind you to heal hurt feelings, either yours or someone else's. Eraser... to remind you that everyone makes mistakes. That's ok. We learn by our errors.

Candy Kiss... to remind you everyone needs a hug or a compliment everyday.

Mint... to remind you to that you are worth a mint to your family, friends, and me.

Bubble Gum... to remind you to stick with it and you can accomplish anything.

Pencil... to remind you to list your blessings every day.

Tea Bag... to remind you to take time to relax daily and go over that list of blessings.

Add Some Herbs to Your Life—Grow an Indoor Herb Garden

Many seniors are moving from their homes into smaller spaces and may not realize that they can still have a little garden. You do not need to have an outdoor space.

It is an established fact that gardening offers countless mental and physical benefits. Plants improve air quality. Plants teach us how to be attentive and responsive growers. Plants improve mental wellbeing. Growing your own herbs and veggies means you know what you are putting into your body. Indoor gardening is relatively little work and generates many rewards.

There are various methods and approaches to indoor gardening and your local garden centre will help you with your questions and needs. Do not hesitate to ask them for help.

Perhaps it is best to start simple to ensure first time indoor gardening success.

The Pot and Tray Method: (under $30)

Step 1: Buy a large and deep plant pot. Make sure there is a hole in the bottom for drainage. You can put pebbles or stones in the bottom of the pot (at least an inch in depth) which will prevent the roots from sitting in the water. I sometimes use bits of Styrofoam (packing from the boxes of things previously bought). I find Styrofoam doesn't add more weight if the pot has to be moved.

Also buy a plastic or ceramic tray with a lip around the edge the catch and keep the plant's drained water from dripping onto the floor. A clay saucer lets moisture pass through so opt for plastic, rubber or metal. Clay pots help with drainage but they can dry out quickly especially if: (1) you have a dry indoor climate; or (2) are growing herbs in the winter months when furnace heat will dry out plants. Try using glazed, glass or plastic containers instead Step 2: Buy premium potting mix. There are soilless methods of growing plants but that is for another article. You don't really need a trowel but it can be handy.

Step 3: Decide what herbs you want to grow. Right now you can find starter herb plants everywhere which will get your potted garden growing faster than starting with seeds.

Step 4: Buy vegetable plant food so you can fertilize them once a month.

Herbs like as much natural light as possible. Place the pot in a sunny spot near a window where they can receive at least 4 hours of sun. If you do not have a sunny place, you may need to buy a grow light. Not a difficult or terribly expensive investment especially if you are going to grow herbs and/or veggies year round.

Indoor herbs prefer the same temperatures as most people around 65—70° F or 21° C. If you feel comfortable, so will the plants. Try to not let the plants' leaves touch the window panes as they can be cool during the night time.

For those folks known to not have a green thumb it is recommended that you start with oregano, parsley, basil and chive plants. If you eat a lot of meats you might try planting sage and thyme. Common thyme is good for meat and lemon thyme goes wonderful with fish.

Distinguish between "wet" and "dry" plants. All of the Mediterranean herbs are dry—so rosemary, basil, thyme, sage and marjoram would go well together in a large potted herb garden. They would need to be watered once a week.

Another potted herb garden you can plant could include parsley, spinach, fennel, chives and mint. They may need watering two or three times a week. It is recommended that you should grow more than one plant because you can harvest your plants for your cooking needs a little at a time (no more than a third) and take from different plants on different days.

Step 4: Plant away. Fill the pot with soil stopping about 3 inches from the top. Moisten the soil lightly but thoroughly-a loosely muddy texture. Dig a small hole, deep down. Remove one of the plants from the nursery container. Gently loosen the soil around its roots-carefully. Put the plant into the hole and pack about an inch of dirt over the top of the root ball. Repeat for the other plants going into the pot. Make sure there is an inch or two between them. Alternatively, plant multiple plants in single pots and group them together on the water catching tray. Water them when finished. Place in the sun. Don't over water. For cooking, cut leaves and stems off the tops firstnot the sides. Enjoy!

BAKING SODA—Fizz—Fizz, How Magical It Is

Versatile baking soda has been around for thousands of years. It is a naturally occurring product with multiple uses in the bathroom, kitchen and outdoors. Baking soda is inexpensive, non-corrosive and natural.

For Insect Bites / Itchiness: Make a paste made of baking soda and water and smear it over the bug bite. or bee sting, or itchy spot and be amazed how quickly the relief happens. This was my Mother's 'go to' treatment for my hives when I was a child —as I seemed to be allergic to everything!

Tired Feet: Mix 3 tablespoons of baking soda into some comfortably hot water in a dish bin and soak your feet.

You can even scrub your feet with a baking soda paste for additional exfoliation.

Hand Cleanser: Mix three parts baking soda with one part of water to make a natural hand cleanser that will scrub away dirt and neutralize garlic / onion odors. Simply rub your hands with the mix. Keep Flowers Fresher Longer: Keep Absorb Toilet Odors: Add a cup of baking soda to the toilet and leave it for an hour before flushing. It will both clean the toilet and absorb the odor. It is safe for septic systems.

Keep Your Brushes and Combs Clean: Baking soda helps to naturally remove oils, build up and residue on your combs and brushes. Simply soak in a cup of water with 1 teaspoon of baking soda. Rinse and dry thoroughly. (My Mom did this too)

Cut Grease Naturally: Add a heaping teaspoon of baking soda to your normal dish soap and let them soak for a while. Baking soda helps to cut grease and makes it easier to clean. This is especially helpful if there is food burned in pot. (Not that I cut flowers longer by adding a have ever had to use this handy tip) (19)

> Boost Your Laundry Detergent: Adding 1/2 cup of baking soda to your laundry helps soften the water making clothes cleaner, fresher and softer.

Deodorize the Refrigerator: Place an open box in the back of your refrigerator to help neutralize odors.

Change the box every two months. Magic!

A Safe Alternative to Harsh Drain Cleaners: Mix 2 parts baking soda, two parts salt and one part white vinegar and pour the solution down the plugholes in your bath, shower and sinks. Leave the mixture to froth away for a half hour then run the hot water to rinse. Easy.

Baking Soda and Moms rock! Cheers to My Mom on Mother's Day
